COMMENT ON THE DAY

Untimely Letter

PRESIDENT Eisenhower is entitled to resent the timing of Marshal Bulganin's letter proposing an agreement with the United States for the banning of H-bomb tests, and also to feel affronted by the manner in which the Soviet Premier made public the document before Mr. Eisenhower had personally received it. The sharp tone of the President's reply was wholly justified.

Strangely enough, Marshal Bulganin appeared to be fully aware that in addressing Mr. Eisenhower on the subject at this time, he was committing a grave breach of etiquette. His intrusion into what is at the moment an internal political issue was, therefore, quite deliberate, and unpardonable.

The wisdom or otherwise of Mr. Adlai Stevenson in introducing the subject of H-bomb tests into the presidential election campaign can be decided by the American electorate. They certainly require no guidance or influence from quarters such as Moscow. Marshal Bulganin's gesture made at this time was in decidedly poor taste.

POSSIBLY, after the American elections are over, the American public will display interest in the position of an international agreement on the banning of H-bomb tests, irrespective of who is occupying the presidential chair. But so far as the forthcoming election is concerned, it is doubtful whether the voters will regard the subject as vitally important in deciding whether to re-elect Mr. Eisenhower or return Mr. Stevenson to the White House.

President Eisenhower can hardly be blamed for dismissing the Bulganin proposal in its present form as being inadequate. The Soviet leaders have consistently refused to consider any of his suggestions for the control and eventual abolition of atomic and hydrogen bombs, and this has given him grounds for entertaining doubts concerning Russia's good faith on the subject.

Apparently it is Mr. Stevenson's belief that this good faith should be tested, and it is of some significance that a number of American scientists agree with him. Nevertheless, the banning of H-bomb tests can have but a limited effect, and unless it is implemented by proposals such as those already put forward by President Eisenhower, will do little to remove the existing threat to world peace.

Free Trade Area

IT is a matter of some importance that both the Labour and Conservative parties have endorsed, in principle, Mr. Macmillan's tentative proposal for Britain's participation in a West European free trade union.

The fundamental objective of the plan—to eliminate trade barriers in the West Europe—is commendable enough, but what has to be thought out is its effect on the Commonwealth as a whole. This applies particularly to those areas within the Commonwealth who today are developing manufacturing industries and whose products enjoy the advantages of imperial preference. Hongkong is among them.

How long the manufacturing members of the Commonwealth could sustain their industries in the face of Continental competition, once the tariff barriers were lowered in Britain, is a matter for conjecture. But it would become a real problem, and it is one which those who are now engaged in the task of working out the free trade area plan need to give full consideration to.

Hungary Bid To Follow Poland Upheaval

STUDENT RALLIES CALL FOR RETURN OF NAGY

Vienna, Oct. 22.

The state-controlled Hungarian radio today broadcast a student demand for reappointment of rehabilitated Imre Nagy as Premier and Iron Curtain experts immediately predicted a Polish-type Government upheaval in Hungary this week.

Budapest Radio said a speaker at one of several meetings attended by thousands of students received a "stormy ovation" when he said "Poland has set an example which our country should follow."

The radio said the students agreed to send a 22-point resolution to the Hungarian Government and the Workers (Communist) Party.

The meeting came a few hours after Szabad Nepszabadság, the official Hungarian newspaper, had stated that Hungary must map her own road to Socialism.

Szabad Nepszabadság quoted the official Hungarian news agency as saying: "the Soviet, Polish, Yugoslav or Chinese roads to Socialism do not above us from mapping out a Hungarian road.

Towns Renamed

To make Lenin's ideas triumph in Hungary means to triumph every party and government decision by minute analysis of Hungarian conditions".

Hungary recently turned its back officially on the Stalinist era, rehabilitated living and dead victims of the Stalinist regime and forced the resignation of the Moscow-dominated Hungarian Communist Party chief, Matyas Rakosi, who has fled the country.

Throughout Hungary today towns, factories and buildings named after Stalin and Rakosi are being renamed.

On tonight's student meeting, Budapest Radio said the first part of the resolution dealt with their political and economic demands.

Purge Demanded

These included demands that those forces holding back the new developments and maintaining the errors of Stalinism should be quickly removed and a rapid progress made in democratisation and the change of leadership. Those responsible for the errors of the past should be punished.

The broadcast said students demanded that Hungary assert an independent Hungarian internal and foreign policy to represent the true interests of the nation.

Other demands raised by students included "a complete change in the leadership of the country and full explanation why all the mistakes were made in the past and who was responsible for them."

The students demanded that the recently rehabilitated Nagy, deposed as Premier and ousted from the Communist Party just last year because of "anti-Marxist leanings and Right-wing opportunism," be reinstated as head of the Government and be made Hungarian Communist Party chief.

What's Happened?

A full report of the country's economic situation must be delivered by the Government including all detail of what has happened to Hungary's "natural resources" the students demanded according to Budapest radio. (According to information available in Vienna, the Hungarian economy remains controlled under Russian control and their production is being shipped to the Soviet Union).

The students said they were in favour of the Hungarian-Russian friendship which, however, must be based on equality," the broadcast said.

Budapest Radio added weight to the significance of the students' demands by saying that "the spirit one can feel walking through the lecture halls of the universities can only be compared with that which swept the nation during the revolution of 1945."

It would become a real problem, and it is one which those who are now engaged in the task of working out the free trade area plan need to give full consideration to.

TITO ENDS TALKS WITH HUNGARY

Belgrade, Oct. 22.

The Hungarian and Yugoslav Communist parties tonight formally re-established their co-operation which was severed after the Cominform dispute in 1948.

A delegation of the Hungarian Party under its first secretary Mr. Erno Gero, tonight had their final talks with Yugoslav Party leaders at the seclusion of President Tito's hunting lodge at Belje on the Danube.

A communiqué was signed after the talks but its text has not yet been published.

RUMANIA NEXT

The Hungarian delegation was leaving tonight by special train for Budapest.

Meanwhile a top-level Rumanian delegation today opened talks here with Yugoslav leaders during which President Tito will continue his drive to convert foreign Communist parties to his brand of communism.—Reuters.

London, Oct. 22.

Two electric suburban passenger trains collided tonight near London Bridge station, one of London's main rail terminals—and first report said there were five casualties.

Check-up For Ike

Washington, Oct. 22.

President Eisenhower will enter Walter Reed Hospital for a pre-election "head to toe" medical check-up, the White House announced today.

The Presidential press secretary Mr. James M. Hagerty said the examiners would fulfil the President's promise to undergo a complete physical test before the Nov. 6 voting.

He said a full report on the results will be made public as soon as possible.—United Press.

Missionary Killed

Algiers, Oct. 22.

Swiss-born Roman Catholic missionary Father Hubert Bauchet of the Order of the White Brothers of Algiers, was found stoned to death today on the road from Pont-Guyon to Azrou in Kabylia.

The missionary was returning to his mission headquarters at Azrou from Pont-Guyon after a Sunday service when he was attacked.—Pont-Guyon.

Two soldiers with rifles slung over their backs were standing in the market place directing the lorries, which arrived irregularly in ones and twos. The soldiers made no attempt to interfere with other traffic.

Groups of villagers watched silently while local children swarmed round the soldiers, who smiled and joked with them.

Most of the lorries turned into a road leading to Lodz, an industrial town about 36 miles away.

Warsaw, Oct. 22.

Soviet Baltic Fleet steamed into Polish waters today less than 12 hours after the pro-Soviet Defence Minister, Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, had been dropped from the new Polish Politbureau.

The appearance of the cruisers between the key Polish seaports of Gdynia and Danzig spread alarm among coastal residents.

Almost simultaneously, General Franciszek Andriejewski, the Russian Army officer who commands the Polish Army's Warsaw military district, vanished from his post.

FOR TALKS?

Official sources said he had hurried to Russia during the night, possibly for consultations. But this news brought no slowdown in Tito's Wladyslaw Gomulka's swift clean-up of the Warsaw regime. The Polish Army and Navy said they were behind him.

The United Peasants Party, one of the Communist allies, removed its president, Wladyslaw Kowalski, tonight and put a Cominist supporter, Stefan Ignar, in his place.

A mass circulation West Berlin newspaper carried a report today that five Soviet divisions had been moved from East Germany to Poland in haste.

It gave no source for the sensational report.

Later, the Fighting Group against Inhumanity, a West Berlin Anti-Communist organisation which claims to have good contacts in East Germany, discredited the newspaper report.

A spokesman for the group said that to his knowledge neither East German informants nor any refugees arriving in the last two days had reported any notable Soviet troop movements.

DRAMATIC SWITCH IN POZNAN TRIAL

Judgment Postponed

Poznan, Oct. 22. Judgment on eight Polish youths accused of rioting in Poznan on June 28 was unexpectedly postponed for at least a fortnight today so that the court could hear more witnesses.

Three of the accused were released from custody at the request of defence lawyers pending the court's next sitting fixed for November 6.

Jan Kaulcer, known as "Eddie Polo" and "the Italian Bandit" who had earlier been described as a ringleader was not among those released.

Stealing Arms

The eight accused, aged between 18 and 23 years, were accused of stealing arms to attack security police headquarters during the Poznan riots in which 33 people were killed and 200 wounded.

During the trial — the longest in the series — a defence lawyer said it could

The three top officials are Vladimir Porche, Director-General of French TV; Jean Darcy, Director of TV programmes, and General Matton Leesch, Director of Technical Services.

World Organisation

HAMMARSKJOLD'S APPEAL

New York, Oct. 22. Mr Dag Hammarskjold, The United Nations Secretary-General, made a plea today for greater use of the world organisation in helping to settle disputes such as Suez.

In his annual report to the General Assembly, Mr Hammarskjold said that the tensions of the times were too severe to permit neglect of the resources the United Nations could offer.

"We should, I believe, seek a development which would give greater emphasis to the United Nations as an instrument for negotiation or settlement, as distinct from the mere debate of issues," he added.

Bearing On Suez

He said that his observations applied to several problems coming up before the General Assembly, which convenes on November 12, and added: "What has been said about the role of the United Nations also had a bearing on the Suez problem."

Noting the progress made in obtaining agreement on atomic-for-peace, Mr Hammarskjold commented: "If the nations have found it possible to join together in a constructive programme to use atomic energy for man's peaceful progress, they should also be able to find a way in time to join together in a disarmament programme that will provide them all with safeguards against destruction."

In a special section devoted to Africa, Mr Hammarskjold said the continent was in "a crucial state of transition."

The urgency of the time factor in seeking peaceful and orderly solutions for Africa's basic problems has become even more evident in the year under review than before."

"In the interest of the common good, the United Nations must seek to be as helpful as possible to this continent in transition to its independent and dependent areas alike," said the Secretary-General.

Challenges

"We live in a period of fundamental and rapid changes in the relationship of nations and peoples having differing cultures and social systems," commented the Secretary-General. "The new age that is emerging is an age of promise, it could also become one of disaster."

Judge Piotrowski said the court considered it had not head sufficient evidence in the case of another of the men in the dock, a 20-year-old driver.

The court would hear them on November 6.—Reuter.

PAY INCREASE

Manchester, Oct. 22. Maintenance work at Britain's textile mills were today awarded an immediate pay rise of five per cent by the Industrial Dispute Tribunal, an independent body set up by the Government for arbitrating in deadlocked disputes.

Mr Dulles called Cambodia a testing ground "to see if new and relatively weak countries in the proximity of great powers will be able to maintain their independence."

Poland's Politbureau today discussed the future of Marshal Konstantin Rokossowski, Polish born but Russian trained Commander-in-Chief now dropped from its ranks usually reliable sources in Warsaw said tonight.

Some unconfirmed rumours said that the Marshal had gone to Moscow.

Group meetings far and wide today expressed support for full-day-feasted Wladyslaw Gomulka the nation's champion of more and quicker helpings of democracy.

In Poznan judgement in one of the trials arising from the bread riots of last June was today unexpectedly postponed for at least a fortnight and legal sources said.

Linked

Privately that they believed this was linked with the political developments.

These circles were talking tonight of the possibility of a general amnesty for the prisoners in the riot cases but Poznan court officials said they knew nothing of this.

The Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu declared today that the alliance with Russia remained the cornerstone of Poland's policy.

Meanwhile the cities buzzed with rumours of Soviet troop movements.

Most people seem to accept that Polish troops were on the move on Friday night but they may have been merely manoeuvres ordered by Marshal Rokossowski.

Since then there have been further movements which may have been no more than returning from positions.

Lorry-loads of armed Soviet troops were moving today through Kleszowice a village halfway between Warsaw and Poznan.

Smiling People

A Reuters correspondent who drove through the village this morning said that two Soviet soldiers with rifles slung across their backs were on duty in the market square directing the lorries with flags.

Despite all this Warsaw seemed to be a city of smiling people today.

Many people felt however delicate the situation may have been on Friday night after the Government and party leaders had resisted Russian pressure to keep Marshal Rokossowski on the Politbureau all dinner had now passed.

The theme of newspaper leaders and political speeches was that Poland wanted to

Mass Meeting

A mass meeting of all local party organisations held at Szczecin (formerly Tetmajer) to day demanded the repatriation of all Polish citizens still in the Soviet Union, the rehabilitation of Generals Berling and Spychalski and apologies from the writer of the recent Pravda article which "slandered" the Polish press, Warsaw radio reported.

A live broadcast of the meeting called by the students of the Szczecin Polytechnical School was given by the radio.

The meeting greeted every reference to Polish sovereignty with stormy applause lasting sometimes for half a minute, but only a few people could be heard clapping when the speakers referred to Polish solidarity with the other countries of the Socialist camp.

A speaker said "We demand that complete independence of the Sejm (parliament), the judiciary and the office of the public prosecutor should be guaranteed and that parliamentary control over the Government should be introduced.

Limited Control

"We demand that the right of the Government to control the press should be restricted and should be limited to writings touching on the defensive capacity of the country or advocating the overthrow of the people's regime."

This also was warmly applauded.

The Sejm will meet tomorrow, Warsaw radio said tonight.

At the session which will probably last one week it will discuss among other things a bill on indemnities payable to persons who have suffered wrongs owing to acts of the state authorities.

A delegation of the Yugoslav Parliament will be present at tomorrow's sitting, the radio said.

Warsaw, Oct. 22.

Poland's Politbureau today discussed the future of Marshal Konstantin Rokossowski, Polish born but Russian trained Commander-in-Chief now dropped from its ranks usually reliable sources in Warsaw said tonight.

Some unconfirmed rumours said that the Marshal had

But a constantly recurring phrase was "on the basis of complete equality." Observers saw in this the real clue to the situation.

There was much speculation on the future of Marshal Rokossowski. It was widely argued that his position as Commander-in-Chief had been made untenable.

On the other hand a commonly held opinion was that he was staying on for some time in his post this being the compromise the Poles had made when Mr Nikita Khrushchev and his colleagues in the Russian Politbureau flew unexpectedly to Warsaw without passports the Poles say smilingly—and interrupted the eighth plenum of the Central Committee.

Bursts Of Applause

From early morning people queued for newspapers.

Nearly five thousand workers at the Zispo locomotive works in Poznan whose grievances sparked off the June 28 riots tonight unanimously pledged their support for Mr Gomulka.

About 20 speakers addressed the two hour meeting which was interrupted by bursts of applause, cheers and enthusiastic shouts of "Gomulka, Gomulka" eye-witnesses said.

University professors and scientists in Poznan were among the group who met and approved the new party programme.

In the Poznan court while waiting for today's proceedings to begin one of the eight youths in the dock read out to his fellow accused extracts from a newspaper report of Mr Gomulka's return to power and the changes in the leadership of the Communist Party.

On Same Level

Students of the Poznan High School of Agriculture passed a resolution welcoming Mr Gomulka's speech.

General reaction of the man in the street appeared to be "now things are going to be different and better."

The Sejm will meet tomorrow, Warsaw radio said tonight.

At the session which will probably last one week it will discuss among other things a bill on indemnities payable to persons who have suffered wrongs owing to acts of the state authorities.

A delegation of the Yugoslav Parliament will be present at tomorrow's sitting, the radio said.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE IN RUSSIA

Moscow, Oct. 22.

The first issue of the US Government Russian-language magazine America to come out after several years' interruption was sold out in a few hours today.

People queued up in front of news stands early in the morning to get a chance to snatch up one of the 50,000 copies of the magazine but on sale.

Today's issue contained several articles on the life of the average American and articles on fashions with quotations of prices in rubles at the official rate of exchange which showed that an American dress coat between $30 to $60 rubles while in the USSR the equivalent is at least 500 rubles.

The report said the Government had allowed the missionaries to remain in the area to develop the teaching of the southern tribes.

It said they had failed in their task and their students had played a not-unimportant part in the rebellion which led to the revolution in the three provinces.

MISSIONARIES Blamed For Uprising

Kharbin, Oct. 22.

Christian missionaries have been accused of being one of the indirect causes of the agitation which led to the uprisings in the three southern provinces of the Sudan in August last year.

The accusation was made in the report of the Administrative Inquiry Commission into the trouble which was published today by the Sudanese Government.

They still raise the flag on . . . A DEAD SHIP STAYS Afloat

THE world's strangest nau-tical shrine is a great battleship, fully manned by dead men, lying submerged in the middle of Pearl Harbour, Hawaii.

Rising from the depths is a tall flag pole anchored on the harbour bed.

Each morning a guard of honour proceeds in a launch and, at exactly 8 o'clock, raises the American flag.

The ceremony is carried out in complete silence, except for the bugle call.

The flag is that of the USS Arizona, the great battleship which is lying on the warm seabed, a rotting, rusting hulk.

By

BILL WHARTON

When the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbour on December 7, 1941, Arizona was the only ship to be completely destroyed at Pearl Harbour. Eleven hundred of her 1,300 officers and men died with her, including the Rear-Admiral.

The United States Navy Department refused to decommission the battleship; she remains on the Navy's books just as if she were still in service, and her colours are raised and lowered daily just as is done on every other fighting ship.

When she was bombed in December 1941, Arizona had almost reached her age of retirement. She was 20 years old, with nine months to go before being declared overage.

She carried twelve 14-inch guns in her main battery, and she was a formidable enemy. Her crew was one of the happiest and most contented afloat.

Caught totally unawares at 8 o'clock on that fateful morning, Arizona bravely battled to ward off the wave of torpedo bombers. She was struck her first vital blow under Turret I. Atmoor-piercing bombs rained on her.

One of these penetrated the deck beside Turret II, and hit the forward magazines, which exploded.

The first that followed rose to 500 feet in the sky. Rear-Admiral Kidd and Captain Van Valkenburgh were killed on the spot.

At that crucial moment a Jap dropped a bomb clean down the funnel. It exploded in the rooms and the boilers blew up.

Hell broke loose. The Jap bombers kept coming at Arizona until she was a blazing inferno from front to aft.

Within ten minutes the fight for Arizona was over. Her back was broken, she listed hard over, she settled too quickly to capsize, and only a platform was built and a silver flagpole to mark the resting place of the battleship.

Today and every day there is wreckage of her superstructure and turrets was left exposed. But still Arizona fought back. The guns were kept blazing almost. Today and every day her colour is hoisted, not half-masted, but in their full glory.

"Whoever said 'These Protest Marches spread like measles' said something."

"Front" organisations—the Soviet Trojan horses in the free world—are being painted in fresh colours and occasionally reshaped. These superficial alterations cannot conceal the simple fact that they are essentially instruments of international Communism.

NEW PAINT FOR THE COMMUNIST TROJAN HORSES

By JOHN CLEWS

THE new Soviet leaders made it pretty plain earlier this year that although world Communism is still their aim, the "tough" tactics of the past are now to be abandoned for more subtle approaches. A smile is most disarming—so long as your gun is kept carefully hidden behind your back. This change of approach is particularly noticeable in Asia and other so-called "colonial" areas.

Over the past 10 years an elaborate system of Communist "fronts" has been built up throughout the world to supplement the more militant Communist organisations. These fronts cover nearly all aspects of life—trade union, women and children, youth and students, scientists, artists, musicians, lawyers, journalists, businessmen. There is also the general "peace" front—the World Peace Council.

In Stalin's time, the aim of these organisations was apparent enough for what they were—Communist cover bodies. Every statement made by Moscow and Peking was at once taken up by them, and every action induced a corresponding reaction.

Conference, which it accused over and over again of "splitting world student unity." Today all this is changed. Following the old Leninist precept about infiltrating "bourgeois organisations," the Communists have ceased their open attacks on such bodies as the International Conference of Free Trade Unions and the European Youth Campaign. Instead, they call for "collaboration." They say: "Let us get together over matters upon which we agree, target for Communist blandishments. The World Federation of Democratic Youth is holding an International Meeting of Young Girls at the end of October in Paris, while the Women's International Democratic Federation is believed to be planning an Asian Mothers Conference to be held at about the same time in Indonesia. In December there is to be an Asian Writers' Congress in India under World Peace Council auspices.

With one or two exceptions—the Moscow Youth Festival in particular—the dates and organisational detail of these events are very vague. The young girls' meeting, for instance, has been postponed once, to allow more preparations; in other words, long-term planning is necessary for these Communist meetings, since they are simply demonstrations of solidarity with whatever line the Communists happen to be following at the time. They are not intended to promote any serious discussions.

Among the most recently formed Communist front organisations are the so-called "Asian Solidarity Committees." They have so far been set up in Japan, India, China, North Korea and the Soviet Union. The Soviet Committee has its headquarters not in any part of Soviet Asia, but in Moscow. So far, meetings of these Committees have been held in Delhi and Peking. It is also proposed to hold an "Asian-African Economic Conference" early next year.

Moscow and Peking now prefer the path of indirect subversion to their old policy of direct action. This is the purpose of all the "trade union" meetings, rallies, writers' congresses and youth festivals.

That is round one to Barbara Turner, in how to win friends and influence mothers-in-law. It was Bobo Daniels who made the exit.

We talked about how a wedding ring changes your sense of value.

"I used to spend my lunch hours at the dressmaker's or hairdresser's. Yesterday I got a big kick out of buying a cushion, and I don't care if I never see a night club again."

Financially, the Turners are in the position that happens more often than you think... The wife earns much more than the husband... maybe three times as much in this case.

Their solution is that Barbara has the business bank account and Russell the private one, and they are both joint accounts. Model Staff Sgt. Hutchinson (seven weeks' trials of Donald Ogden) has seen less of his husband than ever before. He works as a night reporter and she works in the day.

Pre-marriage, in an old dressing-gown and no make-up, she brewed herself a cup of tea for breakfast.

Now, Donald is just coming home from work when she is going out. So their breakfast hour must be as glamorous and cosy as normal newlyweds' dinner-time.

LOVE IN BLOOM BUT HOW LONG DOES THE BLOOM LAST?

THOSE fragile "new-bloom" months of marriage—they are the trickiest, most dangerously difficult time in a woman's life.

I, for one, am much happier in the tenth year of my marriage than I ever was in the first. And I'm perfectly sure every truthful woman would say the same.

All the glossy magazine talk about "the enchanting post honeymoon period" is bunkum.

It's anything but enchanting—explosive.

On the CREDIT SIDE you have the indescribable satisfaction of banging the front door in the face of prying nosy-parkers; and the tender awareness of "belonging" and really being alone.

But on the DEBIT SIDE (for the working bride, anyway) there is learning to dovalot a full-time job of housekeeping into a career.

And there is the shock of finding out that a chamber in the moonlight may be an untidy monster in the bathroom.

NOT SO QUIET

CHEERING round with bridegroom who-made-the-headlines in the last few months, I find it's all not-so-quiet on the newly-wed front.

Barbara Lyon (daughter of the famous Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels), who has been a week married to Russell Turner, crept down the carpeted stairs of her London home at 9 a.m. and quietly murmured, "We had an awfully late night. Would you like some breakfast?"

While the coffee perked she muttered: "I never realised it was so difficult running a house. I'd never scrubbed a floor before. We lost our daily help, and what with cooking, working and painting furniture, I have been sheer murder."

She told me of the first time the two sets of parents came to dinner: "I washursting in the kitchen and the two mothers came out to help. And you'll never guess which one went out first!"

That is round one to Barbara in how to win friends and influence mothers-in-law. It was Bobo Daniels who made the exit.

THIS row about transmilkling is easily understood. It is an experiment in the milking of cows by progressive selection. Each stall is numbered, and the automatic milker works in reverse, so that odd and even numbers are milked alternately, but in such a sequence as to ensure that no two cows, in juxtaposition, that is, in adjoining stalls, are milked consecutively. The essence of transmilkling lies in this selective process. Critics of transmilkling say that there is no point in numbering the stalls, because of two adjoining cows one must be an odd number and the other an even number. To which the answer, so far, is that there is nothing to prevent two even or two odd numbers being side by side. In fact, this would make transmilkling easier, as the machine would skip one of the two cows, and go on to a third. Where did you get it?

YESTERDAY'S RUGGERCLUB 'A' DOWN GARRISON ISLAND TO KEEP THEIR UNBEATEN RECORD

By "PAK LO"

In a thrilling encounter yesterday evening, under floodlights on the Club ground, the Club "A" added yet another victory to their so far unbeaten record this season when they overcame Garrison Mainland by 9 points (1 try, 1 dropped goal, 1 penalty goal) to 3 points (1 penalty goal).

The Club fully deserved this win, for they were better in practically every department, and with the larger share of the ball they were continually attacking.

Only good kicking, and some dreaded ten yard rule came in fine "ouch kicking" by Wainwright, the full back, head them off bay. It was not until the closing moments of the first half that the Garrison got into their opponents' half of the field. Then the Club had been battering hard at the defences, but had only once crossed the line.

For the Garrison had yet another excellent game, and in the minor danger to the Club. He did not get enough support however, and thirteen when they got the ball, dived with it instead of handing it on.

The role of the Club back division, though especially Stevens and Wright, while the Club forwards were quite on the ball in the loose, after Wright and Roy, and then half the strength of the Club, they won.

Jeffery the Club boxer just didn't seem able to put a foot wrong. The full time back half of the scrums on the Club side with a regularity and speed which easily helped Stevens, Williams, Ross, and Penman, those in the loose, and the tackling of the Club's newer three was a joy to behold.

DIFFICULT PENALTY

The Garrison kicked off and were soon on the defensive within yards of their own line. Within minutes O'Kelly missed a difficult penalty on the Garrison 25, and seconds later was given another chance from the same spot. Again his kick missed, and the Club were awarded another, as the now

SECOND HALF

The Club continued to put on the pressure in the second half and five minutes from the end O'Kelly made it 9-0 when he dropped a perfect goal from about 25 yards out. Just before this Stevens was extremely unlucky not to score when he raced after a kick ahead, and the ball bounced the wrong way.

Madras, Oct. 22.

Australia gained a strong position in the First Test with India today when they took their score to 219, which gave them a first innings lead of 169, and then dismissed two Indian batsmen cheaply in the second innings.

Indian spin bowlers troubled Australia when the visitors continued their innings and they dismissed Craig, Ken Mackay and Burge while 35 runs were added, 29 of them by Mackay.

A crowd of more than 20,000 watched play in cloudy weather. A ninth wicket stand of 87 runs in 70 minutes between Johnson and Crawford placed Australia in a sound position by the end of the day.

Both were severe on spin bowling and a spate of runs caused the Indian captain to take the new ball at 235.

Though the scoring rate dropped a little, pace men could not break the partnership and spinners Patel and Mankad were soon brought on.

The latter ended Crawford's innings at 287 when the Australian stepped out, missed and was stumped.

Crawford's breezy 34 included four fours.

Johnson went on to complete 50 in 70 minutes.

HIS HIGHEST SCORE

After tea Gupta had him caught at midoff for 73 his highest score of the whole tour, his previous best being 44 against Worcestershire at the start of the England tour. He hit seven fours in stay of nearly two hours.

In 50 minutes left for play when India opened their second innings, they lost opening batsmen, Mankad and Roy, who both fell to Lindwall's pace attack.

Both Lindwall and Crawford sent down a few bouncers and off one of these Roy hooked Lindwall for four, but in the same over he attempted a drive and snicked a catch to first slip.

Five minutes before the close Mankad tried to hook a bumper, failed to connect properly.

Chromik of Poland (13 min. 51.0 sec.) former world record holder for the steeplechase, Miklos Szabo (Hungary), yet a third 4-minute miler likely to compete in this event, whose best time was also accomplished last October (13min. 52.4sec.).

There can be no doubt that the Olympic record will be handsomely beaten, almost certainly by the first six men at least.

Great Britain could finish with three men in the first six and it goes without saying that Pirie could win. No one in their senses would venture to predict a world champion in such a hot field.

As in the 5,000 Metres, no

English-speaking athlete has up to date won a gold medal in the 10,000 Metres (6 miles 370 yards)

The United States had a second place in the first race at

Stockholm and Great Britain a third in 1920.

Again as in the 5,000 Metres, the Olympic record of 20 min.

14 sec. made by Zatopek when at Helsinki he repeated his

Olympic victory, seems certain to become the equivalent of 13min. 52.4sec.

A few weeks ago the

Hungarian Sander Iharos set up a new world record of 20 min.

14.8 sec. at his first attempt at the distance. This took 11.4 sec. off Zatopek's time in 1954 when he became the first man to beat 20 minutes.

If it "couldn't happen here," the more's the pity. It seems only proper for the young to start as cads—from which the very word caddie is, I believe, derived.

In most European countries it is common not only for girls

but grandmothers to carry clubs for them. I often wonder what becomes of Gertrude, who did so well for me at Wansbury 20 years ago—she carried a little wooden rattle, I remember, for smoothing out the bunks—or

Denise, whose distracting radiance cost me an early round in the French championship at St. Germain. I suppose they, in turn, are grandmothers—though

I suspect any longer caddying at golf is unlikely.

SPLENDID START

Well, here is a splendid start.

The precedent has been set, the social barriers are giving way, and for hundreds of years all over the country, especially those who have had free coaching through the Golf Foundation, and may feel they owe a little someth-

Hate And Win Is U.S. Swim Code

Jack Wardrop goes back to America in January. He has another three months to do at Michigan University before taking his final pre-law BA examinations. Before he goes he would like to pass on to Britain's young swimmers the knowledge he has gained in the hard school of American University sport. He told me:

In my young days (says this "old man" of 24 summers) we had to learn competitive swimming by trial and error. It wasn't until I went to the States that I really learned what it was all about.

When I got back to Britain last month I planned to spend a few days in Wallasey with Neil McKechnie (Wardrop's predecessor as 110, 220, and 440 yards ASA champion) to help him along, especially over 200 metres, the distance our relay team will have to swim in Melbourne.

BEST DISTANCE

It's my best distance (Jack is world record-holder) and if it wants my help I'll be glad to give it. Perhaps I shall be able to do so in the Olympic training week at Blackpool.

Whatever the results of my trials I still want to help British swimming.

Swimming in American Universities is treated more as a business. Though it is an amateur sport, it is presented professionally to the public.

I learned to be a competitor, not just a swimmer having fun. When I race now I have learned to hate my rivals' guts. I suppose that is what's called the killer instinct.

There isn't much worrying about style in America. But conditioning and the determination to win are all important.

Almost all coaches in America hold university degrees in physical education, following four or five years of study. And they have to provide results, especially in inter-university matches, or they don't hold their jobs. So we swimmers learn that we too have to win.

OUR WEAKNESS

That means learning to stand up to the strain of training and competition mentally as well as physically. That is the main weakness in British swimming. There is too little opportunity for the swimmers to have inculcated into them the real meaning of competitive swimming and all it demands on mind and body.

During the formative years between 1948 and 1952 whenever the Wardrop twins went on tour their entourage of five went too. These were the five men of Motherwell.

People called it the "Wardrop circus". Holidays were planned to fit in with the big swimming meetings — few athletes had better care.

In Olympic parlance, "Chef de Mission" was Pop Wardrop, a blacksmith by trade. A quiet man but a wise one. Jack thinks a great deal of his father, and he told me:

Dad never says anything until he's thought hard about it — so when he speaks it's a valued judgment. I learned more from him than anyone.

Bobbie Henshaw, a railway driver, acted as our "second". He used to be a Powderhall runner and always saw that we were rubbed-down and warm before and after our races.

Jimmy Kerr, a steelworker, weighed up the opposition, and kept our morale high, and then

Cook's Half Dozen

Harry Allen is 48 years old and a cook at Whitchurch (South Wales) Hospital. He is also a happy right winger for the Hospital side in the Cardiff Amateur League. Recently he performed the incredible feat for a man of his age of scoring six goals against Ruth Rangers, but still his side only drew!

JACK WARDROP STORY as told by PAT BESFORD

There was physiotherapist James McKnight and Doctor Douglas McIntyre.

MEETING PLACE

My mother wasn't interested in our actual swimming. When we had a hard race she didn't ask: "What time did you do?" But "Did it hurt you to do it?"

But she was always there to find the things we had lost when getting out of our swimming trips. And we had always lost something.

The Wardrops' small house in Wilson Street, Motherwell, is the meeting place for swimmers in Scotland who travel miles to find their father Wardrop's advice.

The man who made Jack was baths master David Crabb, of the famous Motherwell Club, who, in 1948 had eight swimmers, including Cathie Gibson, Margaret Girvan, and Jack himself, in the British Olympic team. A record for any one club. Says Jack:

Mr Crabb gave me my chance. Throughout my swimming career in Britain he trained me and gave me all the facilities he needed. Now he is with me again.

Air Travel Is Speeding Soccer As All The World's Game

Says SIR STANLEY ROUS

Invited to enlarge on suggestions about Soccer's future which he made in the current FA Year Book, Sir Stanley Rous, secretary of the Football Association, told Roy Peskett what he considers to have been among the important postwar developments.

Since I became secretary 22 years ago I have made it a practice to draw up development plans for the years immediately ahead. Unless an organisation has a fairly clearly defined policy for the future, much effort will inevitably be wasted. At the moment we are working on another of these "five-year plans" which in due course will be submitted to the FA Council.

Here are a few of the important developments of recent years:

The growth of international Soccer, largely due to modern air transport. Nowadays, even club teams travel as far afield as South America, Russia, Australia, and think little of it.

England rejoined FIFA and entered the World Cup tournaments. She has also assisted in FIFA's other activities including the very important international courses for referees.

Appointment of a full-time manager for the England team and the introduction of "pre-match get-togethers."

The increase in the number of "B" internationals, the introduction of "Under 23" games, and the whole series of Youth internationals, including the International Youth Tournament.

PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE UNIT IN GERMANY

Seductive Voice Lures Troops On Manoeuvres

Boeblingen, West Germany, Oct. 22.

The husky, seductive voice of a pretty American girl is one of the weapons at the disposal of one unit of the United States Seventh Army which uses words and pictures as weapons.

Known as the Fifth Loudspeaker and Leaflet Company, this unit does not give much away. Generally referred to as "the 5th L and L," it is the only psychological warfare unit with the United States Army in Europe.

the men of the comforts of home, a warm bed and a fire, and the fate of their loved ones, or it may be to try to spread panic, undermine morale and tap the will to resist by telling the men how hopeless their position is.

Based at Boeblingen, known to Americans usually as "Bubblegum," in southwest Germany, all its 60 men are specialists and technicians: expert psychologists, linguists, artists, writers, printers, lithographers and mechanics.

Midnight Marlene

But the star member of the staff is, or rather was, a 25-year-old American girl who is known to all and sundry as "Midnight Marlene." Her real identity is a closely-guarded secret.

When Seventh Army troops are in the field on an exercise, "Marlene" broadcasts suggestive, insidious propaganda to the opposing forces over the Company's loudspeakers for half an hour around midnight.

While the troops on manoeuvres shiver in their camp-toilets, the men of this unit are working overtime in their air-conditioned trucks and trailers.

Their campaign to undermine the fighting spirit of the men usually begins with a day-long barrage of illustrated leaflets showered into the "enemy" troops' position from low-flying aircraft or by carefully fused shells which explode in the air and scatter their load of pamphlets over a wide area.

The pamphlets may, for example, give warning of "mud typhus," an imaginary disease, or tell the men that they are surrounded and cannot hold out, they may spread false rumours or give misleading advice and sow mistrust of their leaders.

Blood-Curdling

When darkness falls, the loudspeakers take over. Mounted on jeep, they move up to the "defending" forces' positions, usually within rifle range, and unleash a 15-minute tape recording of blood-curdling noises, such as the sound of massed tanks rumbling into action, accompanied by firing and centred shouts and orders.

This can throw the "defending" forces into a panic because they think an attack is imminent. When order is restored, the next 15-minute tape is run through, producing the noise of an artillery barrage, machinegun, rifle and mortar fire, intended to unnerve the soldiers.

About midnight, as the climax of the "show" approaches, the loudspeakers change to playing gramophone records of sentimental, sometimes nostalgic, songs.

Then "Marlene" comes "on the air" and speaks to the men huddled in their foxholes. She talks to the soldiers about how cold and wet and uncomfortable they must be, the attacks they have had to face and the worse ones yet to come. She tells them how well off they would be if they just crawled out of their foxholes "and came over for a bite of real good, hot food."

Warm And Dry

Come over for a drink," she purrs. "My tent over here is warm and dry. Come over and see me sometime."

Some of the troops always succumb to the call of this honey-silk voice.

But recently "Marlene," who in real life is a schoolteacher, left Europe to return to the United States. Only tape recordings of her voice are left. Now the Fifth Loudspeaker and Leaflet Company is looking for a replacement.

The unit's work is planned by expert psychologists who know to just what human weaknesses to appeal. On every occasion, their schemes may be to sow discord and distrust, to remem-

Aid Offered Satellites

Washington, Oct. 22. The United States has conferred with the Governments of Rumania and Czechoslovakia on possible American economic aid to those countries, informed sources said today.

Such aid would, however, require the approval of Congress which does not reconvene until next January.

The aid envisaged by American officials may form part of a general revision of American economic relations with countries likely to loosen their ties with Moscow, these sources said.

At the same time, Washington sources said that reports of American plan for big-scale assistance to Poland were "premature." — France-Presse.

Visitors Will See New Art Gallery In Catacomb

Rome, Oct. 22.

Visitors to Rome will next year be able to see wall paintings in a newly discovered underground "art gallery" which has been neglected for the past 1,500 years.

It lies 50 feet under a modern housing estate in the suburbs of Rome, near the historic "Latin Gate," where one of the oldest roads of ancient Italy entered the city.

The paintings adorn the galleries of a newly-discovered catacomb, where Christian families buried their dead 1,600 years ago. Archaeologists will work all through the winter to restore them which have been described by experts as one of the richest collections of art dating back to the days of early Christianity ever brought to light here.

Unknown artists covered the walls of the burial chambers with Bible scenes, stories from the myths of Greece and Rome, and hundreds of decorative patterns of flowers, peacocks, and cherubs.

Father Ferrua had himself lowered into the cavern on a rope. Making his way along the main corridor, to the original entrance blocked for centuries by a landslide, he entered one of the side chambers and immediately realized that he had stumbled upon a series of paintings "the like of which, both in quantity and quality, has never before been found in an early Christian burial place."

On walls glistening with the damp of 1,600 years, the colours had faded to a mere shadow of their former brilliance. But he was able to distinguish paintings remarkable for the novelty of the subjects chosen and the vivacity of their execution.

On one wall of the chamber, the artist had depicted the drunkenness of Noah. Noah is shown reclining on one elbow, clutching a large wine jar, in his left hand and raising a goblet in his right hand.

DRAMATIC REALISM

In an arch of the vault, portrayed simply and directly with the dramatic realism of a fresco from Pompeii, Father Ferrua saw the scene depicting the deception of Jesus by his brother Jacob.

He was astonished not only by the vividness of the representation, but by the choice of episodes which do not appear among the subjects of any other early Christian painting...

Passing through more chambers opening off the two main corridors, which form roughly letter "T", the longer measuring some 160 feet, and the shorter 85 feet, Father Ferrua found on another wall a portrait, totally unexpected in a Christian burial place, of Cleopatra, the Queen of Egypt. She is seen clasping to her bosom the poisonous asp which she used to commit suicide in order to avoid being taken to Rome as a captive.

Why the artist chose to depict this scene in a Christian catacomb is not clear. One suggestion is that he wanted to point the moral of the penalty of sin by means of a well-known story.

FAMOUS SURGEON

Father Ferrua went on down the central corridor, the flickering light of torches revealed a six-sided chamber, with a vaulted ceiling supported by six columns. It contained no tombs. Part of its roof had been destroyed by piles driven through it for the construction of houses above.

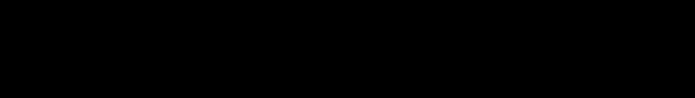

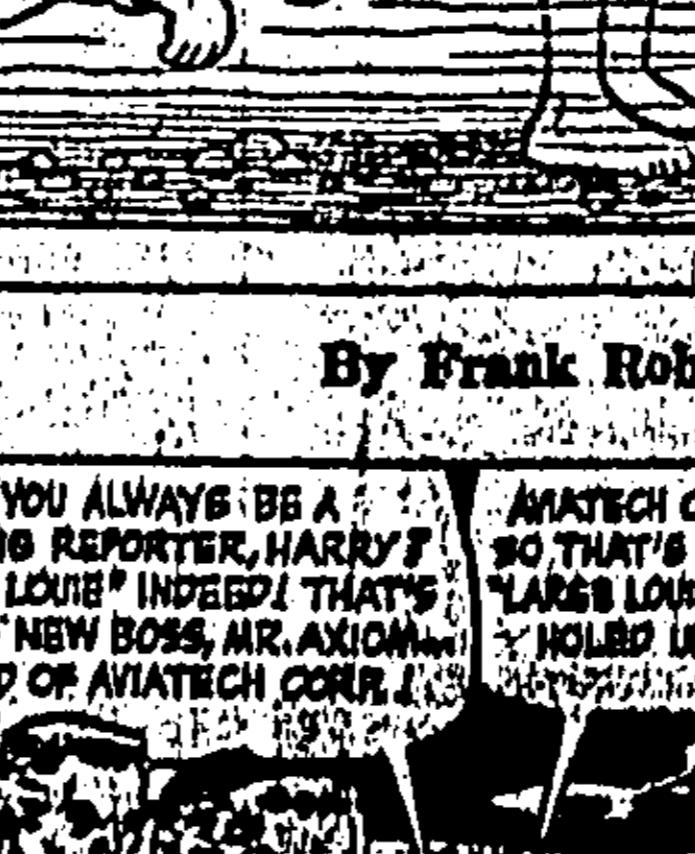

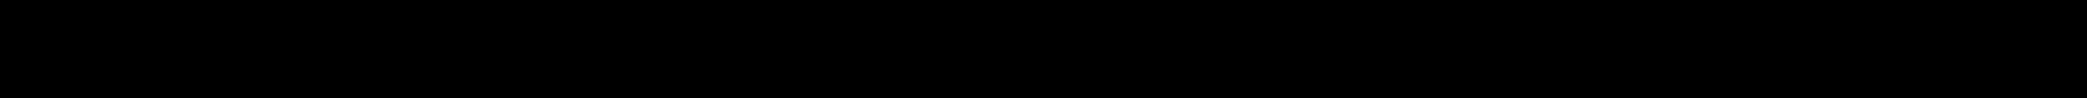

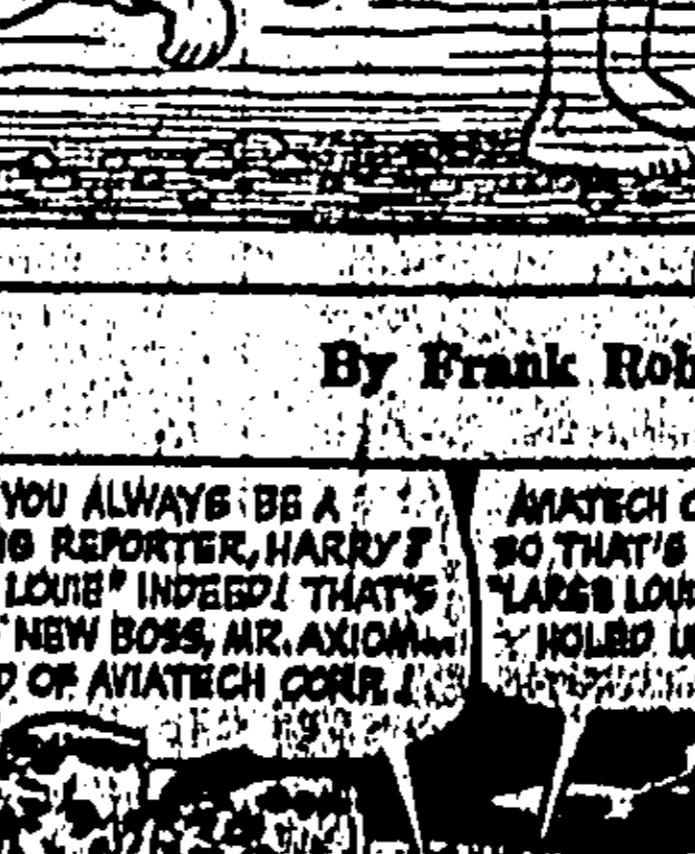

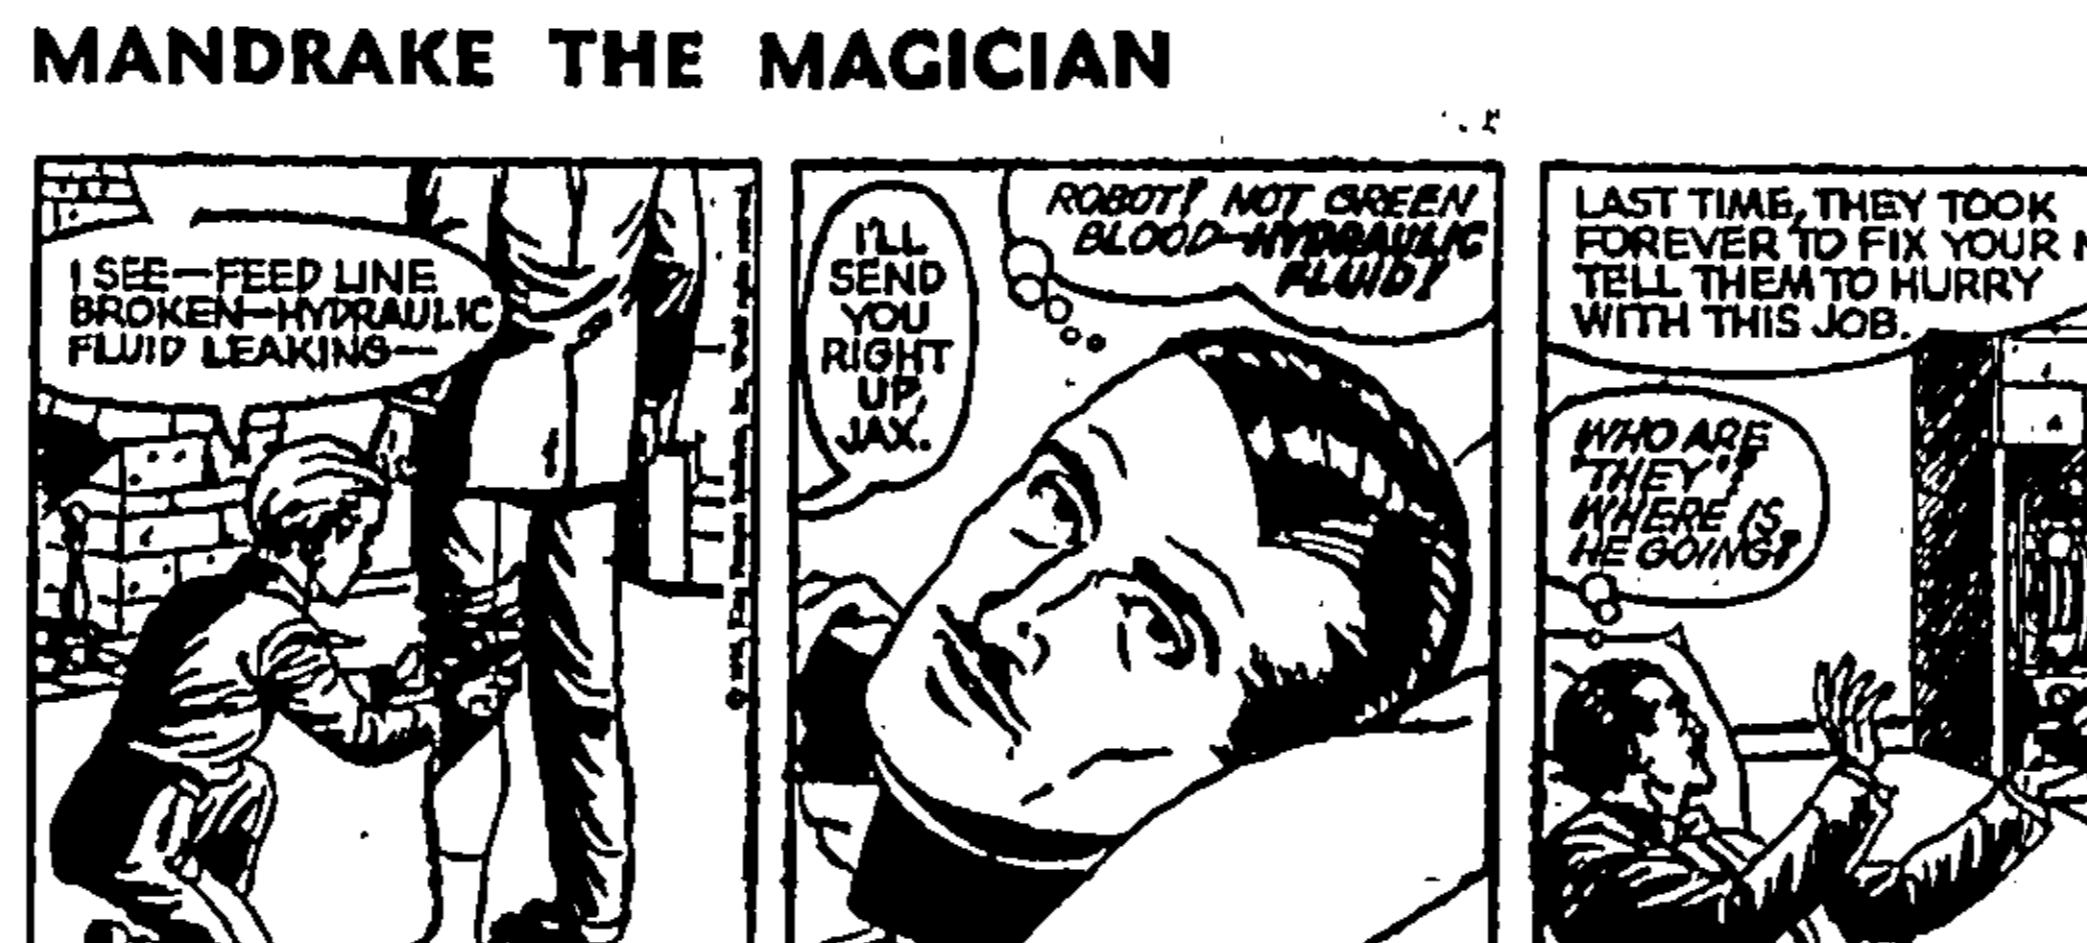

Here, the principal picture shows an old man talking and pointing to a body lying on a table, while a group of young men stand listening. Father Ferrua believes that this represents a famous surgeon of the fourth century giving a lecture to medical students.

Although he admits that the presence of characters from pagan mythology is puzzling, Father Ferrua considers that a fourth century Christian could, "with a good conscience," have chosen examples of virtue from non-Christian sources.

PICTORIAL CYCLES

But he adds that perhaps raised by this atmosphere, and especially by its pictorial cycles, will be able to explain the long delay before any solution is found.

The Romans, he is convinced, by problems of inheritance, will only admit the authorship of those unknown artists who had direct contact with the Christians.

TRADE and COMMERCE SECTION

European Free Trade Area

UK GOVERNMENT
NOT RUSHING
INTO SCHEME

From RONALD BOXALL

London, Oct. 22.

Events have moved swiftly since Mr Macmillan revealed Britain's interest in the proposed European free trade area and these have served both to confirm the expected merits of the plan and to bring into discussion some of its not so expected demerits.

In Britain the Conservative Party in conference at Llandudno have discussed the plan far more calmly than might have been expected. No doubt this was partly due to the salvo notice at which the subject was thrown open to debate, but the Conservatives' quiet acceptance of the Government's intentions owed a lot to the remarkable statements from the platform that the Government would not rush into the scheme or overlook Commonwealth interests.

Considering Plan

The Labour Party also appears to be more concerned with safeguarding special interests than in actively opposing the plan. According to a report, it will support the plan subject to certain provisos concerning the right of a member to direct exports to particular markets and the reconstitution of the European Payments Union.

Both sides of industry are also considering the plan and their reaction is on the whole to be favourable. The Economic Committee of the Trades Union Congress is seeking further clarification from the Government before reaching a final decision but its views are unlikely to differ much from those of the Labour Party leaders.

Meanwhile work is proceeding on the actual setting up of a European free trade system. The six nations—France, Germany, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—who are planning to form themselves into a customs union met in Paris last weekend to settle their principal outstanding differences.

The Commonwealth is also affected by another potential difficulty facing the European free trade planners. This concerns the problem of determining the origin of the goods entering the European free trade area.

Similar System

Under imperial preference arrangements goods have to contain—a certain minimum percentage of Commonwealth material and about to make them eligible for preferential tariff treatment.

This involves a complicated method of costing and accounting which, as far as it is, does not prevent the origin of certain goods being called into question from time to time.

A similar system of certifying the origin of goods would also have to be established for the European free trade area. Otherwise what is to prevent a manufacturer from importing semi-finished goods from outside the area doing a small amount of work on them and then claiming duty free entry into another country inside the area?

Britain's favourable attitude towards the plan has pleased many people on the Continent but this pleasure has not been unanimous. On one hand, it is felt that Britain's participation will offset the threatened German domination of European trade—and this is particularly welcomed by the smaller states. On the other hand, fears have been expressed that the existence of the plan for a free trade area to include Britain might weaken the resolve of the six nations who are planning the much more comprehensive customs union. In other words a danger is seen that the original plan to break down trade barriers in Europe may be dominated by a more limited scheme which arose out of it.

Difficulties

Certainly the more ambitious customs union cannot come into being unless the countries concerned are prepared to submit to far more outside control over their policies than any group of nations has ever accepted before.

The visionary plan for an international trade charter foisted on the very rocks that are beginning to appear on the surface of the European Customs Union talks. France is reported to be insisting that the other five nations write their policies into law within a year. In regard to the number of hours in a working week and equal pay for women, United Nations questions like these are settled—it is difficult to see how the customs union can function successfully.

There are difficulties, too, concerning the free trade area planners and several of these will directly concern Commonwealth interests. The bulk of Britain's imports from the Com-

Big Business
Not Affected
In Vietnam

Singapore, Oct. 22.

The Vietnamese Consul in Singapore, Mr Pham Kac Rau, said in an interview today trade restrictions recently imposed by the Saigon Government would not affect big foreign import and export firms.

Mr Rau said the restrictions would only affect small foreign retailers.

The Vietnamese Government last month announced regulations barring foreigners from trading in fish, meat, coal, logs, piecogoods, cereals and scrap metals.

NOT TO WORRY

Mr Rau said: "Since most of the businessmen in Singapore are only interested in doing big business in our country, they do not have to worry. They can carry on business as usual."

He said his government had imposed the restrictions to give the Vietnamese people a "small share" in their country's economy.—Reuter.
